Welcome to The Drummond at Albury.

The original building on this site was a hostelry known as The Running Horse. In the mid nineteenth century it was acquired by the banker and landowner, Henry Drummond, who demolished it and replaced it with the current building and renamed it The Drummond Arms.

Drummond's daughter Louisa married Lord Lovaine who became the 6th Duke of Northumberland and on her death in 1890, the land passed into the hands of the Northumberland family.

The family have always maintained a very close association with Albury and following a major investment the current Duke officially re-opened the hostelry on the 28th April 2010 and renamed it The Drummond at Albury.
